RECALLS SINCE 2012

Search our food recall action data:

This is the openFDA web destination for all food product recalls monitored by the FDA. When an FDA-regulated product is either defective or potentially harmful, recalling that product—removing it from the market or correcting the problem—is the most effective means for protecting the public.

Important note: The data prior to mid-2012 is incomplete and has not been validated with internal FDA data. This dataset, like all datasets at openFDA, is a work in progress.

Reason for recall:

Recalls are almost always voluntary, meaning a company discovers a problem and recalls a product on its own. Other times a company recalls a product after FDA raises concerns.

Only in rare cases will FDA request or order a recall. But in every case, FDA's role is to oversee a company's strategy, classify the recalled products according to the level of hazard involved, and assess the adequacy of the recall. Recall information is posted in the Enforcement Reports once the products are classified.
